JAPANESE ADVANCING ALONG THE ENTIRE LINE

HIDDEN MACHINE GUN POSTS IN ISOLATED SPOTS ARE MOST EFFECTIVE IN CHINESE DEFENSE; UNITED STATES STANDS AT CROSS-ROADS OF INTERNATIONAL POLICY

CHINESE HOLDING GAINS OF ENEMY TO A MINIMUM

Excellent Defense Despite Modern Equipment of Invaders

AGAIN—BOMB CHAPEI

Infantry Lines Follow Path Made by Aerial Bombardment

By Dixon Hoste
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

SHANGHAI, Feb. 25.—(INS)—Japanese forces opened a general offensive along the Kiangwan front today extending as far north as Miaoshin, five miles away, making an advance of about two-thirds of a mile in the vicinity of Kiangwan itself.

The Japanese were advancing slowly all along the line.

The hidden machine-gun posts, located at isolated spots, continued to be an effective branch of the Chinese defense, and the Chinese sharpshooters held the Japanese gains to a minimum, despite the invaders' modern equipment.

Tanks, armored cars, and heavy guns were employed by the Japanese, and it required the combined strength of all of these offensive arms to route the defenders.

The Japanese were careful to clean up these sharpshooting posts as they advanced, infantrymen pausing the onward march to do this work while artillery guns prepared the ground ahead for further drives.

The Japanese attack was opened with an aerial bombardment of the Chinese positions, followed quickly by a heavy artillery fire. Then the infantry lines advanced.

The field headquarters of General Uyeda were moved across the Shanghai-Woosung Railway as the Japanese advanced westward. This was believed to have been done because of the great danger from Chinese sharpshooting which was prevalent in the old position.

Despite the combined infantry and aerial attack, however, the Chinese were believed to have held their lines well. The Japanese had issued no communiques up until the early afternoon, and their positions were not known to observers.

While the Kiangwan attack was being carried out Japanese planes also appeared over Chapei and again bombed this shell-ridden area.

In the Kiangwan area attack the Japanese were reported to have set fire to Miaoshin, although there was no immediate confirmation of this report.

NANKING, Feb. 25.—(INS)—Chinese government officials today denied knowledge of the death of General Ma Chan-Shan, Chinese hero of Manchurian battles, as widely reported in foreign dispatches.

TOKYO, Feb. 25.—(INS)—Widely published reports of the assassination of General Ma Chan-Shan, Chinese hero of Tsinhsihar and other Manchurian battles, were declared false by Japanese government officials today.

General Ma is alive and active in the new Manchurian regime, they said.

The "Seeing Eye" is Told Club Members by Col. Frank

LANGHORNE, Feb. 25.—At guest day of Langhorne Sorosis, junior members had the privilege of presenting Colonel Maurice S. Frank and his dog "Buddy."

Colonel Frank's talk was on an explanation of the philanthropic organization, the "Seeing Eye." He said that they take German shepherd dogs from the age of 14 to 24 months and start training them by the knowledge of dog psychology. At the end of their two or three years at school they are educated dogs, and serve for ten years guarding their masters, who, to them is personal property. These dogs can lead their masters to any destination he can give them by orders of left and right, and they know traffic signals.

There are 79 dogs working all over the United States. The main training school is in Switzerland. There are others in France, England, Italy, and one in Morrisville, N. J.

Colonel Frank is a native of Nashville, Tenn., and the governor of that state gave him the title of Colonel because of his wonderful work in organization of "Seeing Eye."

Tokyo, Feb. 25.—Soviet Russia authorities are fearful of the Japanese air invasion at Siberia and as a result constant martial law is in effect at Vladivostok and other Siberian cities, a European traveler just arrived from Vladivostok told I. N. S. today.

A thoroughly reliable observer, this traveler recounted a dramatic story of fear which has overtaken the Soviets and revealed the dire circumstances to which chief industries of Siberia have fallen.

BELIEVE PHILA. GIRL DIED FROM EXPOSURE

Nude Body is Found in Clump of Bushes in Field

IN MENTAL LAPSE

By David P. Sentner
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 25.—(INS)—The slim young body of moonstruck Elsie Flothmeier, daughter of a minister, who had beauty and life ahead of her, today lay cold on a slab in the morgue.

The 22 year old college girl ran naked into death in a strange and as ever recorded in the exotic annals of the West African gold coast, where she was born.

In the teeth of winter's icy breath, Elsie hung her clothes on a blackberry bush and stumbled through the wild briars until she fell from exhaustion and exposure.

Twenty-four hours after she was missing from the home of her father, Rev. Frederick Flothmeier, pastor of the Taber Lutheran Church in Olney, her nude body was found concealed in a clump he high grass.

She lay face down, sixty yards from where she had disrobed. Her head rested on her right arm, her fist clenched, her luxuriant head of hair modestly covering her body.

Her only remaining garment was a girdle. Her shoes lay a few feet away.

There were scratches on the girl's face and body. But Assistant Superintendent of Police Joseph LeStrange today said these were received during her mad flight.

Trips to Nearby Washington Landmarks

By Edward W. Hoeker

Because of the bicentennial of the birth of George Washington, keen interest has been aroused in all manner of Washington landmarks. Southeastern Pennsylvania is fortunate in possessing so many of these landmarks, associated with the career of Washington in war and peace. Herewith is one of a series of twenty articles describing nearby places which are linked with the story of the Father of his country.

XVI.—The Whitemarsh Headquarters

Complying with the decision of a council of war to make another move in the direction of the British lines, the American army left Whitemarsh, November 2, 1777, and went into camp three miles farther east, in Whitemarsh and Upper Dublin Townships. This encampment continued until December 11th.

Washington's Whitemarsh headquarters house has been preserved, though much altered. It is now the home of Mr. and Mrs. Radcliffe Chestnut, Jr., and is situated west of Oreland, along Sandy Run.

George Emlen lived in the house when Washington made it his headquarters. The main structure was 35 by 80 feet in dimensions, facing Sandy Run. There were wings for the kitchen and servants' quarters, as was customary in early times at the homes of families of wealth.

The encampment extended from Bethlehem pike eastward along the highland bordering Sandy Run as far as Fitzwater town and Limekiln pike. Near Fort Washington, on Bethlehem pike, are the remains of an earthen redoubt erected at the time of the camp. Much of this land is being purchased by the state for an extension of Fairmount Park.

Having comfortable quarters and evidently looking forward to a stay of some length of time, General Washington on November 7 informed the officers of the army that as he had STIMSON BLUNTLY NOTIFIES JAPAN OF STAND OF U. S.

Inferentially Charges Japan With Wilful Violation of Treaty

SUPPORT IS REFLECTED

Senate Naval Affairs Committee Urges Navy Program Enactment

By Hobart C. Montee
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—(INS)—The United States today stood at the crossroads of international policy, with one signboard pointing the road of peace flanked by fences of paper promises, and another pointing a road of orderly respect backed by a formidable navy.

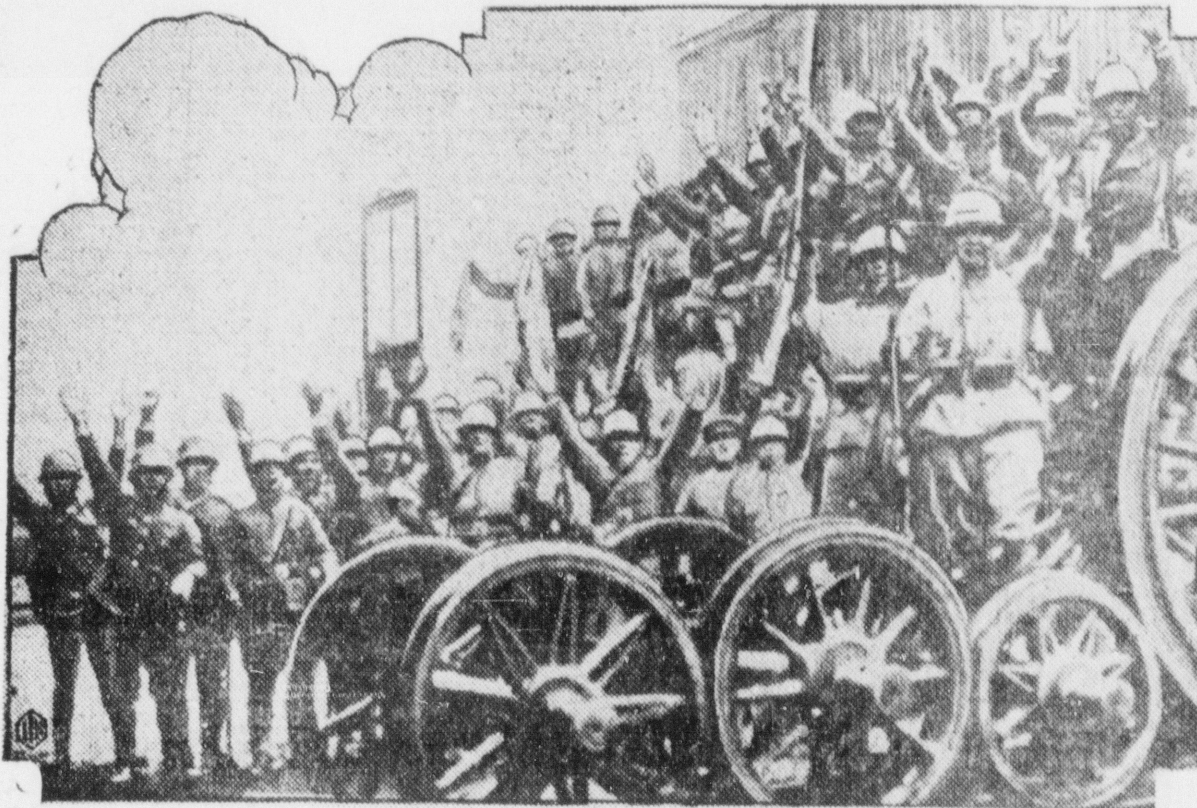

In effect, the United States has asked Japan which road we shall travel. Secretary of State Stimson has bluntly notified Japan that unless the country is willing more strictly to observe both the letter and the spirit of her paper promises the United States is determined to rely for her on protection upon something more substantial than international treaties which Japan has treated as paper fences.

This is the substance of the interpretation placed upon Stimson's open letter to Senator Borah (R) of Idaho, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, in which he inferentially charged Japan with wilful violation of the nine power treaty and declared that this treaty could not be disregarded without abrogating all the other treaties signed at the Washington Conference in 1922. Principal among these other treaties was the agreement for the limitation of naval armaments.

Stimson's mention of the American Government's surrender of its then commanding lead in battleship construction and fortifications of Guam and the Philippine Islands, was interpreted as warning that unless Japan accords more strict observance to her treaty obligations this government will embark upon a naval building and shore fortification program.

Prompt support for Stimson's stand was reflected from the House and Senate. The Senate naval affairs committee urged immediate enactment of a program authorizing construction of a navy up to treaty limits. Gratifications was expressed by numerous Senate leaders that Stimson had done with "throwing paper bills" at Japan and had decided upon a more positive policy.

Japanese Reinforcements for Chapei

Although communiques from Japanese headquarters are optimistic in the extreme, neutral observers in the war zone declare that in spite of superior equipment and training the Japanese Army has been unable to make any worthwhile impression on the Chinese line of defense between Chapei and Woosung. Japanese losses in several unsuccessful offensives against Chapei have been heavy and constant appeals for reinforcements are being sent to Tokio. This photo shows one batch of Jap regulars just after they landed at Shanghai to be rushed into the firing line.

Lieut. Earl R. DeLong In Charge of Planes in Hawaii

It is of interest to note that the PK-1 airplanes built for the United States Navy by the Keystone Aircraft Corporation and now in operation in Hawaii are under the command of a former resident of Bristol.

Lieut. Earl R. DeLong, U. S. N., commanding officer of Squadron VP-1B, to which the planes were assigned, is well known by many residents here. He spent his boyhood years in Bristol.

Lieut. DeLong's years of experience in naval aircraft have enabled him to succeed in the difficult mission of erecting and testing the planes in time for the fleet maneuvers.

Lieutenant DeLong has a brother, John DeLong, and a cousin, Russell DeLong, residing here.

Mr. Jay Lichtenwalner, Keystone service representative, who has been in Hawaii since last September, met Lieut. DeLong in the course of duty and he communicated the above facts to the Keystone officials.

FEARS SLAYING BY CULT

Norristown, Feb. 25.—That other members of the strange cult to which Samuel Forti, 45 year old slain night watchman belonged, are living in fear of their lives, is expected to be brought to light at the coroner's inquest here today.

At least one member of the cult is said to have asked Chief of Police Wolfendin of Lansdale to protect him from imminent death. The man, Dominick DeLuca, 38, visited police yesterday. The object of his visit, he told Wolfendin was to "give some light on the murder of Forti and to express the fear he might be marked for a similar fate." DeLuca is said to have written out a will while at police headquarters.

Chief of Police Wolfendin's repeated promises of an arrest led to the belief that he may intend to walk into the court room here today with the slayer.

RUTH JUDD TO DIE

Florence, Ariz., Feb. 25.—Under sentence of death, Mrs. Ruth Judd, "double trunk" murderess, awakened today in a cell at the state penitentiary. Mrs. Judd was given into custody of Warden William Delbridge shortly before midnight by Sheriff J. R. McFadden, of Phoenix.

Mrs. Judd left Phoenix with Sheriff McFadden, a jail matron, Mrs. Lon Jordan, and two deputy sheriffs, about two hours after Judge Howard Speakman had sentenced her to hang on the gallows here May 11th for the murder of Agnes Ann Lerol.

Mrs. Judd rode in the rear seat of the car with Mrs. Jordan and the two deputy sheriffs. They left the county court house at 8 o'clock last night and made the drive to Florence in three hours. Mrs. Judd was surprised no large crowd had gathered at the jail to witness her departure.

"WASHINGTON" RETURNS TO GREET ROTARIANS

Asks That They Emulate The Courage of Brave Men of Valley Forge

PAGEANT IS STAGED

History today turned back 200 years, and to Bristol came George Washington and his staff. The gallant leaders in their military garb and in pageant took Bristol Rotarians back to colonial times, when strife was rampant in these United States; and in stirring words implored them to "emulate the faith, the spirit and the courage of the brave men of Valley Forge."

The pageant followed the weekly luncheon meeting of the Rotary Club in the Elks' home, and five episodes were depicted. The boy Washington, portrayed by Ernest Gamble, Jr., was shown in a cherry tree scene, with the part of the elder Washington being taken by George Ardrey.

"The Spirit of '76," with this trio's stirring "Yankee Doodle," revived stories of tales of the Revolution. Drummers were Chauncey E. Stoneback, Sr., and Lester D. Thorne; with Samuel Shire as the fife; and Evan Saylor, flag bearer.

The next episode of those trying days showed General Washington and his staff at Valley Forge. Washington (Edward Lynn) in his salutation to the Rotarians, said: "My Countrymen: During the two hundredth anniversary of my birth and in this period of stress and trouble through which our nation once again is passing, let me urge up, on you the need to emulate the faith, the spirit and the courage of the brave men at Valley Forge. I present to you the officers of my staff. First, that gallant soldier of France, whose aid and sympathy mean so much to us, the Marquis de Lafayette (Dr. William C. LeCompte). Our untrained soldiers could not meet successfully the professional troops of Europe were it not for the patient, persistent training of our Inspector General of the Army, Baron von Steuben (Dr. John J. Hargrave). When a hazardous enterprise is to be undertaken, there is always an officer ready to attempt it. He has endeared himself to our people by his bravery and dash. General Anthony Wayne (Frank Pfeiffer). Beloved by his soldiers, always to be depended upon in emergency, and one on whom my mantle should fall in case anything should happen to me, is General Nathaniel Greene (Louis B. Girton).

With the raising of the curtain the great leader and his staff were seen around the council table at Valley Forge, outlining plans for the campaign. An especially impressive scene was the next, with Washington seen at prayer beseeching guidance and strength in his hour of trial.

With the recessional, Washington's benediction was heard: "May the spirit of the marching men of Valley (Continued on Page 5)

BENSALEM FATHER AND TWO SONS ENTER GUILTY PLEA

Prison Sentence Suspended On Frank Konopka, Sr., and Two Sons

MUST PAY THE COSTS

Third Case This Week Where Parent Has Been To Blame

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 25.—A father and his two sons, charged with receiving stolen goods and who reside in Bensalem Township near Trevoose, pleaded guilty and were given suspended prison sentences on the condition that the father, Frank Konopka, Sr., 45, pay the costs of prosecution for his sons, Walter Konopka, 19, and Frank Konopka, Jr., 22, by Judge Calvin S. Boyer.

"This is the third case this week in this session of court that a father has been directly responsible for a crime committed by his sons," said Judge Boyer, who severely reprimanded the elder Konopka.

"If your sons wreck their lives and end up in the penitentiary, you will be responsible for it. The Court does, however, see a difference between the three of you and the highwaymen you associated with," Judge Boyer said. "The phase that disturbs the Court is that you as a father set a criminal example for your sons."

Frank Robinson, 46, colored, who previously served time in the County Prison, was sentenced to pay the costs, fined $5 and serve not less than 3 months nor more than 3 years in prison.

Robinson, who pleaded guilty and served as one of the Commonwealth's witnesses, was instrumental in getting a place for an alleged load of beer for McCann and Nuneviller, both of whom were sentenced to prison Tuesday.

Both of the youths were placed on probation under the direction of Probation Officer Antonio Russo.

Charged with assignment, Mabel Seltzer went on trial before Judge Boyer in Court Room No. 2. Witnesses for the Commonwealth included Peter J. Riley, a member of the State Police, and Sergeant Reese L. Davis. On trial at 11.30 today.

Jesse Fonda, 21, who State Police arrested on the afternoon of Dec. 17, last year, on a farm in Hilltown township, went on trial before Judge Keller on charges of possessing and manufacturing intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes.

Trooper Thomas Toye, of Doylestown State Police, testified that Fonda signed two statements concerning the operation of the moonshine plant. Both statements were read in evidence.

In the raid, the officers seized a 150-gallon still in operation on the second floor of a farm house and a complete equipment. There were 2400 gallons of mash destroyed by the officers in the raid, and 15 gallons of moonshine whiskey was confiscated.

Trooper Toye read Fonda's statements, in which the defendant said that Michael Kwasnik employed him to run the still and that he formerly operated the same still that was moved from Montgomeryville to Hilltown township. Fonda, in the statement, said that he had seen Kwasnik at the Hilltown township farm several times, and that Kwasnik paid him $30 a week.

According to the statement, Fonda was approached in Hatfield by a man who asked him if he wanted a job running a still.

The defendant was in the cellar of the farm house, Trooper Toye, testified, when the arrest was made, and at that time Fonda told him that he was pumping water up to a still to make moonshine whiskey.

Dr. J. W. E. Harrison, Court Chemist, testified that the mash tested 9.3-10 per cent alcohol, and the distilled liquor tested 48.2-10 per cent.

Defense attorney, John L. DuBois, of Doylestown, questioned Troopers Toye and Rielly concerning any mistreatment given Fonda to obtain the statements. Both officers denied that any force whatsoever was used.

"BLIND FLYING"

Department of Commerce air experts are working for an amendment to the Federal aviation law which would require all air transport pilots to pass tests in "blind" flying. As passenger planes become less and less dependent on weather conditions it becomes more important that pilots be trained navigators.

"Blind flying" is the severest test of the pilot. It involves navigation and direction of the plane by means of instruments alone, which is particularly difficult for those who have been trained to trust to their judgment, instinct and muscular skill. An expert fair-weather pilot may be helpless in a fog, blizzard or darkness.

Commercial flying and plane construction have now reached that stage of their development where unfavorable atmospheric conditions present the greatest hazards for the air traveler. All of the more disastrous accidents to large transport planes in the United States have been directly or indirectly due to bad flying weather.

If the aeronauts in the commerce department are all they pretend to be, what they recommend is for the good of commercial aviation and for the protection of the flying public. Provided they enjoy the confidence and respect of the air transport managements, their recommendations will be heeded, if not anticipated.

BOYCOTTING JAPAN

Chinese boycotts against Japanese goods are blamed by Japan for her armed invasion of Chinese territory. No effort having been made by Tokio to settle amicable the differences between the two nations before resorting to force, the League of Nations under its covenant is required to call a world boycott against her. Japan would consider that an act of war against her, as it would the boycott congress has been asked to declare. That makes it a sort of boycott round-robin.

Congress will not declare a boycott on Japanese trade because the United States does not care to get entangled further in the mess in the Far East. Our immigration laws closing the gates to the Yellow race have provoked enough Japanese ill will.

It is not difficult to explain the disinclination of the league to resort to the boycott weapon. That is a drastic step which would have far-reaching effects and might produce international complications more serious than the one it is intended to cure. And it is not certain that a boycott would claim the support of enough members of the league to insure its enforcement without difficulties.

More and more, as the Japanese attacks increase, it appears that Tokio took all these things into account before deciding on her course of action in Manchuria and China.

Those not on the level are undermining society.

Doing nothing takes more time than doing something.

Some people seem to think the world is a menace to civilization and should be destroyed at once.

SYNOPSIS

For years, Paco Morales ruled the peons in Mexico with an iron hand, confiscating their lands and driving them from their homes, but the crisis has come. "El Coyote," the mysterious bandit, avenges every outrage perpetrated by Morales. The ranchers await their unknown protector's word to revolt. Morales, with the aid of the U. S. Cavalry under Major Blount, has searched for the bandit in vain. Ted Radcliffe, an American whose late father was ruined by Morales, is in love with Adela, the Spaniard's beautiful niece. Jito, Morales' ward, is jealous of Ted. Bob Harkness, Ted's friend, tells him he has plans for settling the score with Morales. While out riding, Ted and Adela lose their way and spend the night in the desert. Adela resents her uncle's suspicions. Later, Bob returns home with Ted and learns that some of his cattle were stolen. He doubts that "El Coyote" is responsible. At Mendoza's, a notorious resort, Bob leaves Ted and goes upstairs to visit Ann Reed, an entertainer. Bob is "El Coyote" and Ann his spy. She is deeply in love with him. As autumn comes, "El Coyote" makes ready to overthrow Morales. When Ted notices Bob's stolen cattle among Jito's herd, the latter explains he just found them and intended returning them. Major Blount invites Bob and Ted to his headquarters to learn the identity of "El Coyote." Bob is puzzled. Morales and Jito are also present. Antonio Ortega, the informer, and one of "El Coyote's" lieutenants, is expected momentarily. Bob goes outside. Two shots ring out. Bob returns and, shortly after, Ortega is carried in. Urged to name "El Coyote," Ortega looks at Bob and, without uttering a word, dies.

CHAPTER XXXVI

"Here's the brandy, sir," announced the orderly.

Mechanically the major reached for the glass and drained it. "By God," he cried savagely, and flung the glass to the ground. "So El Coyote gets him right out of my camp. Under my eyes, surrounded by a squadron of cavalry." Bitterly he laughed. "Who will be fool enough to play traitor to El Coyote now?" Then slowly, very slowly, the little major pulled himself secret. For the moment all hope had died. "Gentlemen," he said dully, "I invited you upon an empty errand. My apologies."

He looked toward the dead Mexican, where the lamplight, as if in high meridian, flickered now across those eternally silenced lips.

Don Bob leaned across the table, his eyes, thoughtful and moody, fixed on the crumpled figure of the Mexican.

"A minute more," he said half aloud, "a minute more and we might have learned so much." Lightly he touched the major's shoulder, then he reached for his hat. "Come," he said to Radcliffe, and abruptly left the tent.

Under escort of a sergeant they galloped out over the desert. As they reached the car Bob said to Radcliffe's surprise, "You drive," and climbed heavily in.

Mechanically Ted took the wheel while his mind raced back to the unexpected tragedy of that past hour. Once more he seemed to hear those two hurried, spiteful shots in the darkness, and saw the look of fear and horror graven on the face of the Mexican. And for the first time it came to him how desperate a game was being played almost under his eyes.

"El Coyote must have surrounded the camp," Ted said at last. "The bandits must have seen us pass. And they were waiting for him outside the circle of cavalry."

Bob stirred uneasily. Ted felt the weight of the man's body against his own shoulder and saw Bob's head droop forward.

For a time they drove on through the night. Ted, uneasy at the long silence, Ted asked, "Tired, Bob?"

No answer. The weight of the older man seemed heavier, and as again Ted looked down Bob's head swayed limply forward with a little sigh. Jamming on the brakes Ted took the man's shoulders in his arms and raised him. The face was dead-white, but in a minute the gray eyes opened and the lips moved.

Very faintly Ted heard the words, "Punctured in the side. Take me out to the ranch." Again the eyes flickered. "Sorry," he whispered, and fainted.

For a brief moment in the silence of the starlit desert Ted sat very still, while one by one past memories crowded in on him, until at last they had formed themselves into an inescapable pattern. With the suddenness of a lightning bolt the truth burst forth. El Coyote!

Curiously, as if he were looking upon a stranger, Ted gazed down at this man who sat so quietly beside him. He felt his own heart pounding and a dull throbbing in his brain. El Coyote! The man all the border was seeking, the killer with a price upon his head. This man so loved and hated, praised and condemned, sat helpless beside him, and suddenly Ted realized that, bandit and killer, this man was the nearest friend he had in the world.

Very gently Ted started the car, then wrapped one huge arm about the limp figure. On that side the man's clothes were already wet with blood. Rapidly Ted sped through the night. Once he looked at his watch—a little after ten. There would be no one at the ranchhouse. The servants would be in their own quarters. Once the car struck a rut in the road, and the man groaned. Ted drove more cautiously, slowing down almost to a stop where the road was broken.

Once on the state highway, Ted shot the car at a mad pace down the road. Mile posts flashed by. The lights of Verdi loomed up to the west, and skirting the town, Ted tore on to the ranch. The bars were down, and driving up to the house he stopped and switched off the lights. Raising the stricken man in his arms, Ted ran up the steps, pausing once to listen, but conscious only of the beating of his own heart. The servants had already gone.

Inside, with hasty, unaccustomed fingers, he cut away the coat and blood-stained shirt. The wound was no longer bleeding. The heart still beat, but very feebly. In desperation Ted looked about the room. A first-aid kit, he remembered, was in the medicine chest, and in a short time he had sterilized the dark jagged wound and fastened heavy bandages over it. He poured a little whiskey between the man's lips, then waited, feeling horribly alone, terribly in need of aid.

As he stood there a faint flush came to Bob's cheeks, and for an instant he opened his eyes, then closed them.

Stooping forward, Ted caught the words, "You can trust the cook. And tell Ann—Ann at Mendoza's. But no doctor—remember, no doctor. You know why." Then again his face paled. Consciousness had left him.

Ted pulled a chair to the bedside. There was nothing to do but wait—and hope. Slowly the minutes of midnight ticked by, and the early hours of morning. Ever his eyes turned to the still form that breathed so slowly beneath the covers. More than once, like some physical chill it came over him how utterly alone was this man whose hand had been raised against the entrenched scheme of things. This man, he found himself thinking, had doomed himself to the lone fight. He could turn nowhere. He could rely on no one. This man who held the border in terror this last outpost, against the domination of the strong, now lay helpless, suffering—perhaps done. And in all the borderland he could look nowhere for aid.

Before dawn Bob's face was burning. Quickly the fever mounted and he tossed restlessly, throwing the light blanket from the bed. Vainly Ted tried to soothe him. An hour later he lay in delirium, his voice rambling in a low monotone. Once Ted laid his hand on the man's hot forehead, and Bob's eyes for an instant opened.

"Tell Ann," he repeated.

In desperation Ted rose. Running to the servants' quarters, he tapped on the door of Bob's Mexican cook. She came, grumbling and sleepy, to the entrance.

"Your master," he whispered, "is wounded. No one must know. I go to bring help. Stay with him. Keep him in bed. You understand?" The old woman crossed herself. "Si."

In two minutes she was shuffling up the steps to Bob's room and had replaced the blanket thrown on the floor.

With a wrinkled hand she gently touched him. "Mother of God how hot he is! Get help quickly, señor. Help for the love of God!"

But Ted was already gone. Mendoza's was at its height. Even from far off the blaze of lights blurred the horizon, and as Ted drew up he heard a roar of applause from within and the tinkle of many glasses. Men's voices shouted a name he could not catch, but as he stepped within all noise had stilled.

A sudden hush had fallen, an expectant hush. The waiters about the crowded tables stood motionless in the smoke-filled room. All faces were turned toward the center of the patio where, in a ring of slowly changing lights, a girl was singing. Ted walked quietly to the nearest waiter.

"Where will I find Ann Reed?" The man nodded to the patio. "It is she who sings, señor."

Slowly Ted drew closer. Just outside the light he stopped and watched her. She moved indolently in that circle of light, knowing herself to be the master of all their moods, feeling the power of her wizardry. The young, fresh voice seemed to come effortlessly from her throat. A low rejoicing voice, in strange contrast with the veiled sadness of her eyes. She held those quiet, attentive faces in a spell.

And when at last she stopped a tempest of bravos and applause shook the long, low room. She smiled and had turned toward the door when Ted reached her side.

"Señorita," he began.

The great black eyes looked up at him. "Yes."

"I am Ted Radcliffe, the friend of Don Bob. It is important I talk with you now—at once."

Beneath the rouge her face went white, and with a little beckoning gesture she hurried down the hall.

"On the stairs she turned toward him. 'Tell me. He is hurt?'"

"He is wounded. He wants you."

"Badly wounded?"

"Badly."

She choked back a sob. "Wait at the door. I won't change. I'll take some things along."

Within a minute she had returned, and in even less time they were in the car, leaving behind them a bitterly distracted Mendoza, who tore his black hair and called down curses on all undependable cantadoras.

Throughout that ride the girl sat quite still, her hands folded tightly in her lap, her face tense and drawn. At Bob's door Ted raised his hand for silence. He looked in, and seeing no change in the white, drawn face among the pillows, motioned the girl to enter. "I'll be out here if you need me," he told her.

She nodded gratefully. "I want to be a little while with him alone."

The door closed silently.

SUPERVISORS TOLD LEGAL METHOD FOR CREATING TOWNSHIP DEBTS

T. H. Kniesly, director of the Bureau of Internal Affairs, spoke before the Bucks County Supervisors' Association, Doylestown, Monday, concerning the legal method by which second-class townships may create indebtedness. His explanation was as follows:

Townships of the second class may issue temporary notes in anticipation of revenue only to the amount which is possible to pay within the fiscal year in which the note is issued. These notes must be paid out of current revenues for that year. Further, and of equal importance it must be remembered that notes issued for sums of money in excess of current revenues without going through the proceedings required by the Act of 1874 and its supplements are not only void but cannot be funded at some later time by going through the regular procedure under the Act of 1874. It has been held that such a procedure is not a validation of previously illegal notes.

If it is necessary for the township to borrow money other than for temporary loans in anticipation of revenue the Act of 1874 and its supplements provide that the supervisors without holding an election may increase the indebtedness of the township to two per centum of its assessed valuation. This has been held absolutely to mean that they may incur indebtedness only to two per centum in all, not two per centum at a time. In other words the total borrowing capacity without recourse to the electorate is two per centum of the assessed valuation. Money thus borrowed should be properly used for the payment of permanent improvements. The procedure for incurring such indebtedness is very briefly as follows:

The Act requires a financial statement showing the present indebtedness of the township, both electoral and councilmanic, the deductions claimed against each item separately, that is the deductions claimed against the electoral borrowing capacity also marked as such. The assessed valuation must be shown on the financial statement and floating indebtedness, notes, contracts, in short indebtedness of any sort except those which are actually within the current year. The financial statement must also show the form, number and date of maturity of the obligations to be issued. The usual and most simple method is to make resolution issuing the obligations a part of the financial statement and attach it to the financial statement. This financial statement must be filed with the Clerk of Quarter Sessions.

The second step in increasing the indebtedness to two per centum is the resolution. The resolution must be passed at a regular meeting of the supervisors, it must state that "The indebtedness is hereby increased in the following amount —; it must state the purpose of the increase; it must describe the form of obligation to be issued, either notes or bonds, etc.; it must set the date of obligations, the dates of the interest payments which must be semi-annual and the rate of interest. It may, or it may not, make the obligations tax free. However, if the obligations are issued tax free the tax levy must be made large enough to include the tax payments. It is absolutely essential that a tax be levied commencing the first fiscal year of the township following the date of passage of the resolution. The tax must be large enough to include the principal, interest and state tax, if it has been exempted, and the tax levy must run for the life of the obligations. The maturity dates must be set sometime within thirty years from the date of the obligations for ordinary indebtedness and within twenty years for refunded indebtedness. The form of the note, or bond to be issued must be included in the resolution. Provision must be made for a sinking fund to retain the tax levied. Some provision may also be made in the resolution empowering one or more of the officers of the township to advertise and sell the securities.

The copies of each of the financial statement and the resolution, both certified by the Clerk of the Court of Quarter Sessions, must be sent to the Department of Internal Affairs. There must be attached to the two copies submission certificates signed by the chairman of the Board of Supervisors. Blank forms for these certificates may be obtained from the Department. If upon examination, the proceedings are found to be correct, one copy is retained by the Department of Internal Affairs and one copy, with an approval attached, is returned to the township. If the proceedings need correction the Department will request such corrections from the township until the proceedings are ready for approval.

CARLISLE—A will dated 1847 leaving the $12,000 estate of Barbara Hess, of Mechanicsburg, to children and surviving brothers and sisters, was probated in court here.

Samuel Hess, a brother, was granted letters as executor of the will, 45 years old.

WILKES-BARRE—The Wyoming Valley Employment Bureau, during its fourteen months' operation, has furnished employment to 2,532 persons, about 35 per cent of the applicants, according to a report submitted by Captain William P. Weiss, director of the bureau.

LANCASTER—A Valentine that followed Chester Watson all over the country for the past sixteen years caught up with him last Valentine Day.

Watson, a traveling salesman, had journeyed from city to city after the Valentine was mailed and the card was continually forwarded by the Postoffice Department.

WEST CHESTER—More than 250 relics of the battle of Brandywine in 1777 will be exhibited here at the 20th anniversary of the birth of George Washington.

The collection, owned by Christian C. Sanderson, who lives five miles from here, is thought to be the largest of its kind in existence.

Sanderson explained how he obtained the rare relics.

"When my mother and I made our home in this historic house I spent many hours wandering along the banks of the Brandywine in search of relics. Most of those I found were picked up during the winter on cultivated fields. Twenty-five years ago, when I began this collection, musket balls were not rare finds in this region.

A saucer used by Lafayette also is in Christian's collection.

HARRISBURG—The spring-like winter in Pennsylvania saved the State Highway Department thousands of dollars usually spent for snow and ice removal, Samuel Eckels, chief engineer, disclosed.

Ash sprinklers went into the discard as violets and japonica bushes bloomed along the state roads.

Eckels said the only severe threat occurred in the northern tier counties where at one time this winter the Department ordered as many as 500 snow plows out to clear the highways.

There were no heavy snowfalls, however, such as occurred in past winters when many state roads were open for long stretches only to one-way traffic.

Cinder piles placed along roads for winter emergencies and as yet unused will be available for next winter, Eckels explained. All money saved by the Department because of the curtailment of snow removal activities will be used in road building, he said.

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 22.—(INS).—What will Pittsburgh, accustomed to river excursions and vacations, do next summer?

As if there weren't enough worries, that one cropped up here when someone made a survey of the steamboats available for dance and excursion trips next summer.

The survey revealed there will be a scarcity of the craft next season. Three of the few remaining boats burned during the past season. Present indications are that they will not be replaced.

Rivermen contemplate conversion of two former packets for the summer trade and there is a possibility that a third craft will be dismantled, its engines placed in a steel hull, and a new excursion boat built.

Meantime, lovers of the rivers are wondering and hoping someone will do something about it.

WEST CHESTER—Charles Glisson, 10, a student at St. Agnes Parochial School here is the owner of an automobile, a fine farm in East Bradford Township, and considerable stock in a going company because his father befriended an aged negro at the time his wife died several years ago.

Glisson's father, the late William Glisson, was a former grocery store clerk.

The farm and other property were left to Glisson in the will of Edward Johnson, who had owned the place for 50 years. He was found dead near his home.

Johnson had previously willed the property to the elder Glisson, but after the father died he made the son the beneficiary.

CHARLEROI—"It's an ill wind—" etc. J. R. Donier had a two-gallon keg of old Monongahela rye whiskey for 21 years and didn't know it.

A howling "northeaster" came along and tore a sheet of tin roofing off his barn. When he went to investigate he found the keg in a corner of the loft, covered with cobwebs.

Maybe it was an ill wind! Donier is a teetotaler.

NEW GOWNS, COATS, SHOW FULL PUFFED AND ROOMY SLEEVES

Are Most Important Part of Every Frock in New Collections

By ALICE LANGELEIR (I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS.—Smart women will have room for plenty up their sleeves this spring. For they are a most important part of every frock and costume seen in the new collections.

Nearly all new sleeves are extremely complicated, having lost that feeling of the Gay Nineties which characterized them last season, they seem to have settled down to interpret the moods of modern women.

Vera Borea's sleeves suggest the Italian Renaissance, slit, puffed and gathered in most intriguing manner.

Jane Regny is showing excessively wide sleeves on both gowns and coats, falling deeply over a narrow band which reaches to the elbow or just below. Some of them are set into the armhole by means of pleats. A charming coat in pastel-blue, slim and graceful, has two wide pouched elbow-sleeves, one white and one in black, combined with white in an asymmetrical maroon model, cut wholly, by dett folding of the fabric.

Sleeves are by no means skimpy this season, often standing out at sharp angles, balancing the lines of the stiffly-starched collars.

Wrists are trimmed with amusing cuffs that are high and starched to the cracking point at other designers.

For formal afternoons, bell-bottomed sleeves are smart, with the fullness beaded or trimmed with ruffles of narrow lace. Detachable three-quarter sleeves are good for spring. Short puffed ones and elbow length are to be seen on many new gowns.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning 'Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul. Skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely. But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resist a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

"Washington" Returns To Greet Rotarians

Forge always remain with you, my countrymen."

A patriotic setting of flags and photographs of the first president added to the splendid program.

The numbers were outlined and staged by Ernest Gannett, Sr.

Proceeding the pageant, the following numbers were given: Chorus, "Hail Columbia;" the American's Creed, Rotarians; poem written by Edwin Markham for the Bi-Centennial of Washington's birth, Richard French; "The Trumpet Call," (Sander), a vocal number by Mr. Gannett, pledge to the flag; song, "Father of the Land We Love" (Cohen), gathering. The program was ended with singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

As on a day about two centuries ago, the "Marquis de Lafayette" today marched under Bristol's historic frame arch, which bore a greeting to the distinguished man in those early days. After his participation in the program at the Rotary meeting, the "Marquis" made his way to the Delaware House, which he visited during his stay in America. The arch which still bears the welcoming words is a cherished piece, and today was taken from the Bracken post home for the occasion.

TRACKS of MAGIC EXPLAINED by WILL L. Lindhorst

CLEVER TRICKS WITH MATCHES

Here are two match tricks that should prove entertaining.

Number one: Light two matches, blow them out and immediately press the heads together so that they will stick. Stand these upright on a corner of a match box, supporting them between the drawer and cover of the box. Place another match on your left thumb, point it at the two on the box as an archer would point an arrow and flip it with the middle finger of your right hand. Although it appears that the match will go straight, it will be found to make several turns, striking the upright matches sideways and upsetting them.

Number two: Ask anyone to pick up one match lengthwise with two more held between the index finger and thumb of one hand. It can be done by grasping the two matches and squeezing the ends together so that the tips will slowly spread apart. You then will be able to pick up the other match in a manner similar to using a pair of tongs to pick up a piece of ice.

TREVOSE FIVE SMOTHERED
BY A. O. H. CAGE TEAM

(By T. M. June)

Scoring a field goal a minute, the fast A. O. H. basketball team ran roughshod over the Trevose basketball team last night on the Hibernians' floor. The final count ended: A. O. H., 88; Trevose, 37.

The "Hibs" garnered little trouble from their adversaries and scored at will. Besides scoring from the floor forty times, the quintet added eight points via the foul route. The Hibernians' scoring machine was in wonderful working order as was their passing system.

Edmund Dugan set the A. O. H. scoring record of the season when he looped the cords for fifteen field goals, and a single foul, a total of thirty-one points. "Eddie" Roe followed with ten points, "Double" Decker and three fouls. Dougherty and Connors had sixteen and twelve, respectively while H. Brady devoted most of his time to stationary guarding also managed to score six points.

Colbert and Baxton scored twenty-three of the visitors' points, although each managed to score one or more points.

In the preliminary game, the A. O. H. Cubs trounced the Trevose Cubs by the overwhelming count of 48-19. The losers were no match for the Bristol team and trailed from the start. At one stage of the game, the locals had twenty-two points before the invaders could net a foul shot or field goal.

Taffe was high scorer for the "Hibs" with fifteen points. The points of the losers were well-divided between the five players.

Believe Phila. Girl
Died From Exposure

"This girl was subject to mental lapses," said LeStrange.

"I believe she suffered one on Tuesday, when she disappeared and wandered around in a daze until she died of exposure."

"You are sure that she was not attacked or murdered?" asked the father, former missionary in Africa.

"I am certain of it," replied LeStrange.

"Thank God for that," sobbed the pastor.

Else had started with her father on a round of parish calls on Tuesday afternoon. Near the entrance of Burholme Park, she told him she would walk through it and meet him at the home of a cousin, Adolph Wegener.

A moon was coming up over the wintry horizon as Else set out.

They say the moon pulls the tides and there are some who claim it will bring bad luck and good luck and play tricks with the human brain.

Else had been in poor health for several years," said her father.

"She failed recently in an examination at Tennant College and she worried over it."

"She began acting strangely and two weeks ago, we took her to Maplewood, N. J., for a change. She remained there a week and when she returned, she appeared in better spirits. "I relaxed my vigilance because she appeared so improved."

Reverend Flotthmeier said that his daughter suffered a mental lapse while visiting relatives in Germany in 1929.

"Her mother was forced to travel to Germany to bring her home," said the minister.

Five persons saw Else "wandering through the sparsely settled section."

At about 7:30 p. m., Tuesday, Mrs. Helen Soltys, only a block from where the beautiful girl was wandering with death, heard a scream.

"Later on that night, I started from sleep and thought I heard a woman scream again," said Mrs. Soltys.

"All night, the dogs in the neighborhood howled."

Some say that the moon makes the dogs howl at night, some even say that dogs howl when some one is dying.

Neighbors of the girl knew her as a quiet, studious type. They said she had undergone a nervous breakdown two years ago and was a patient in a hospital. When she recovered, she renewed her studies at Temple University and later at Tennant College. She has two young brothers and a younger sister.

Although preliminary examination of the body suggested no theory of murder, the official cause of death will not be pronounced until an autopsy has been performed.

"King" Clancy, defense star of the Toronto Leafs, is out after the record for black eyes. He has had about 50 in his time, averaging about 5 a season. The "King's" headlong style of play is chiefly responsible for the discolored optics.

Battering the "Chinese Verdun"

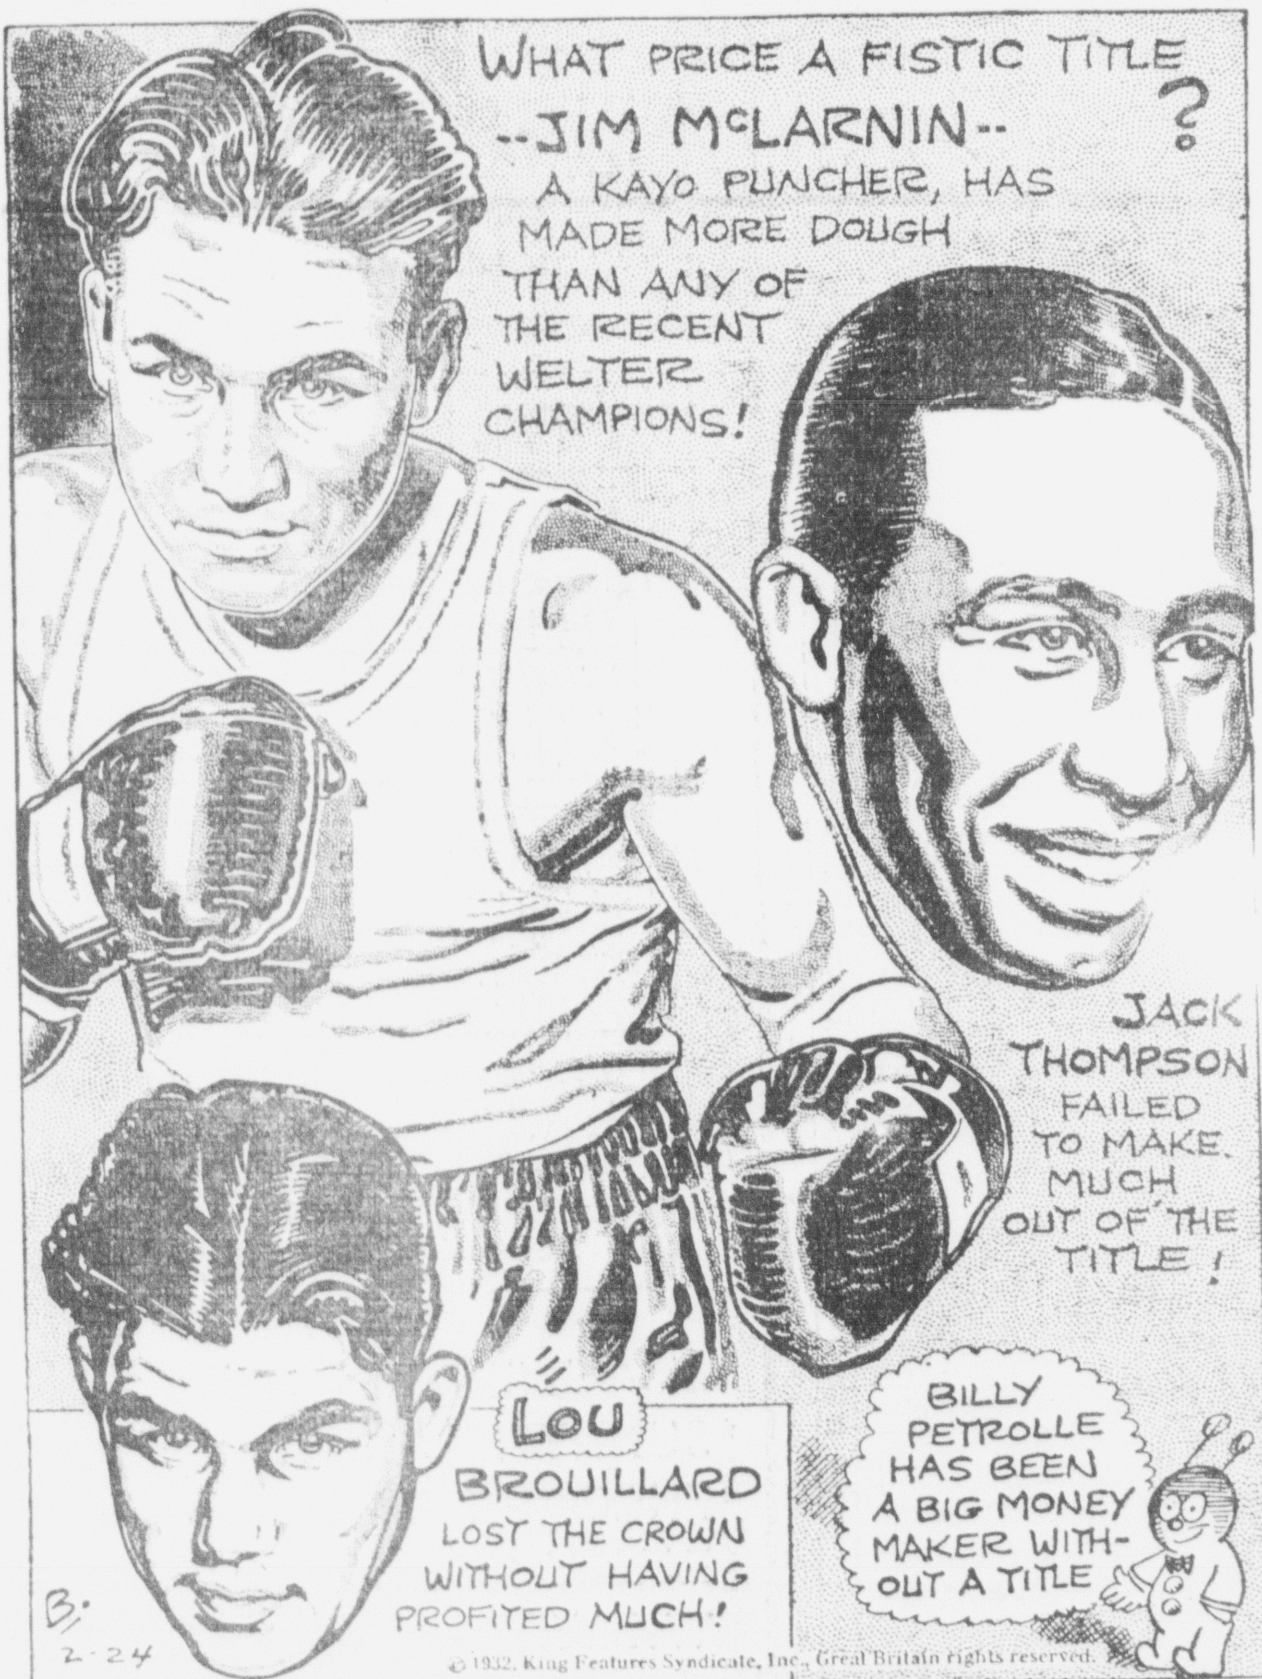

Made in the actual firing line, this photo shows one of the Japanese mountain batteries that are bombarding the Woosung forts in action. The Japs, who are concentrated at this point, form the crack artillery corps of the invaders, which was rushed from Tokio for the special purpose of subduing the forts. But despite the terrific bombardments by land, sea and air Woosung has held out and earned for itself the proud title of the "Chinese Verdun." Latest advices from the front indicate that the Japs have realized they took on a man-sized task. There is now talk of doubling the amount of troops on the Chapei-Woosung line in a last effort to crush the Chinese.

WHAT does it profit a man to win a championship in the prize ring? Not much, apparently, for you can count off on your fingers the champions who have garnered fortunes by the deft use of their fists. And these men had something beside the mere title of champion. They had color and the fighting class that appealed to the ring fans. They had ability, magnetism, and biggest attraction of all—a punch! "Bill the puncher, and pack the arena" has long been an axiom with matchmakers.

Going back, not too far, in pugilistic history, we find gladiators in the flyweight and bantamweight divisions—classes which are notoriously poor from a money-making standpoint—raking in the shekels. Joe Lynch, Pete Herman, Pancho Villa and Bud Taylor: They were fighters and had color in addition to titles. And they cashed in because of that fact. Take the two leaders in these respective divisions today: Midget Wolgast, king of the flyweights, and Al Brown, bantam champion, they have failed to make big money because they are not colorful attractions. Great fighters both, but they lack that appeal which packs 'em in at the gate.

Probably the best example of the worthlessness of a mere title—without those other fistic attributes—is seen today in the welterweight class. Lou Brouillard, Jack Thompson and Jackie Fields, present incumbents, have been kicking the welter-title around between them, but all three together have not earned as much as either Jimmy McLarnin or Billy Petrolle! And Jimmy and Billy are not title-holders.

The latter two fistic luminaries have what it takes to make the customers lay it on the line. Both are punchers, both have the fistic ability and color which the fans demand—and both never fail to pack drama and thrills into their engagements, which after all, is the basic lure of prize-fighting. Because of that fact McLarnin and Petrolle would be money-makers as champions, should they acquire titles.

Of course they would like to be champions, if only for the honor a title brings, but as for money-making, they are content to go along meeting the best opponents available and cashing in while the dough is there.

The biggest money-prize in boxing is, of course, the heavyweight title. It is a million-dollar asset today, to the man who holds it, regardless of his fistic prowess, color or what have you. But it is the only title in pugilism worth its salt, unless the champion has those essentials—color, courage, ability and a punch!
